SIBERIA AND THE OSTIAKS. (The Times.) The Geographical Society of St. Petersburg has recently published an account of an exploration made in 1876-7 by M. Poliakoff on the River Ob and the neighbouring region. From St. Petersburg to Tobolsk he followed the ordinary route, when he scended to the village of Samarovski; then he explored the lower course of the Ob. The great interest of the people of this region is that they maintain the characteristics which marked Central Europe, Taels. Germany, and France in pre-historic times, 103.63 reindeer. From the recent alluvial nature 20 00 of the ground, the valleys of the Irtish and the Ob frequently change their character. The right banks of these rivers are high and the left low, and the latter is 48.00 frequently undermined by the force of the currents and precipitated into the river-" Balance at Credit of 1877 ....... 7, 70.99 bed, to the danger of human life and the destruction of fish. Moreover, the waters of the lower parts of the Irtish and Ob are often in winter so injurious that fish cannot live in them. As far as Berezoff the vegetation of the river banks is composed mainly of thick forests of pine and similar trees. These used to be the haunts of innumerable fur-bearing animals of great industrial value. These forests, however, have recently been somewhat rapidly thin-7,210.03 ned over considerable tracts of the courses of the Ob and Irtish. This has been chiefly Tis. 14,281.02 caused by fires, of which there is one or more every year, not to mention the vast conflagrations of 1826, 1840, and 1858. Not only do these fires desolate and ruin the country, so far as its forests are concerned, but in proportion as the forests lose their primitive aspect, the animals migrate to more distant quarters, if they are not destroyed in the flames. Thus the beaver has completely disappeared from the Ob region, ____ 5,353.30 while a hundred years ago it flourished in many affluents of that river and the Irtish. 8,927.72 Now it is only exceptionally found at the sources of the Konda and Sossva. In general the region around Obdorsk, both as to its nature and its people, presents the same characteristics which belonged to Europe, France, and Germany at the end of the glacial period and the beginning of specting certain subjects referred to in the the present period, when vast fields of moss, intersected by small woods of coniferous and other trees, were the prevailing feature. Europe during the reindeer period. The Mr. Ramsay stated that in the absence Ostiaks of the Ob recall by their mode of of his colleagues when the Report was life the pre-historic inhabitants of France written he did not feel justified in drawing and Germany. The primitive condition is shown, above all, in the small fecundity of Mr. Brondsted proposed that the Report the population, the great mortality of chilbe accepted and the Accounts passed. This dren, and the character of their marriages. Unions among the Ostiaks take place between people closely related; polygamy is permitted; and little regard is had to age in the matter of marriage. The women, who are regarded as saleable property, are in a very sad condition. They represent, however, M. Poliakoff tells us, a higher degree of culture than the men; they form the element of progress in Ostiak society. They make, from various plants, carpets, which recall those of the Kamtchdales, New Zeawhich had been received in answer to the landers, and the old inhabitants of the Council's advertisement respecting the pre-historic pile-structures of Switzerland. They still practise tattooing; they wear
